

Fejervarya kawamurai

System: Freshwater_terrestrial

Kingdom	Phylum	Class	Order	Family
Animalia	Chordata	Amphibia	Anura	Dicoglossidae

Common name Japanese Rice frog (English), Marsh frog (English)

Synonym

Similar species

Summary The Japanese rice frog, Fejervarya kawamurai has recently been expanding beyond its historical range in its native Japan. There are concerns on this voracious predators impact on anuran populations in its invaded areas. it has been observed juvenile Fejervarya kawamurai predate on Hyla japonica juveniles and froglets in a rice field in Kobe City, Hyogo Prefecture, Japan.

view this species on IUCN Red List

Principal source:

Compiler: Shyama Pagad (IUCN SSC Invasive Species Specialist Group)

Review:

Publication date:

ALIEN RANGE

[6] JAPAN

BIBLIOGRAPHY

4 references found for Fejervarya kawamurai

Managment information

Toshio Doi "Field Observations of Predatory Behavior by Juvenile Rice Frogs (Fejervarya kawamurai) on Japanese Tree Frogs (Hyla japonica)," Current Herpetology 33(2), 129-134, (1 August 2014). <https://doi.org/10.5358/hsj.33.129>

General information

GBIF Backbone Taxonomy.

IUCN SSC Amphibian Specialist Group. 2022. Fejervarya kawamurai. The IUCN Red List of Threatened Species 2022: e.T48440953A48440979.

Shao K, Chung K (2022). The National Checklist of Taiwan (Catalogue of Life in Taiwan, TaiCol). Version 1.11. Taiwan Biodiversity Information Facility (TaiBIF). Checklist dataset <https://doi.org/10.15468/auw1kd> accessed via GBIF.org on 2024-03-28.