

GLOBAL INVASIVE SPECIES DATABASE

EICAT profile: Acacia auriculiformis

MR (Major)Acacia auriculiformis

Date assessed 2022-05-01 Year published 2022 Eicat category MR (Major) Justification for EICAT assessment Species richness in A. auriculiformis sites was lower than in natural forsests for plants (Bhuiyan et al., 2019) and birds (Hernandes, Volpato & Venancio Martins, 2013). Confidence rating Mechanism(s) of Competition; Indirect impacts through interactions with other species maximum impact Countries of most severe Bangladesh; Brazil impact Acacia auriculiformis was found to reduce species richness compared to natural (even degraded) forests, Description of impact thus, indicating that A. auriculiformis outcompetes native species.; A. auriculiformis indirectly affects the number of bird species in Acacia plantations, with twice as many species found in natural forests. Sabrina Kumschick Assessor Contributors Reviewers EICAT authority Sabrina Kumschick. (2025). Acacia auriculiformis . IUCN Environmental Impact Classification for Alien Recommended citation

